

ABSTRACT

A system formed from a plurality of interdependent units 200A to 200E are controlled to achieve an outcome by establishing a desired action for each unit responsive to the outcome but independently of the desired action of the other units. The control methodology has particular application for robotic manipulators.